

Tyler Bond

Senior Fellow

National Academy of Social Insurance

Washington, D.C

Tyler Bond is a Senior Fellow at the National Academy of Social Insurance, where his work focuses on Social Security. He joined the Academy after seven years as the Research Director at the National Institute on Retirement Security (NIRS), where he oversaw a multi-project national research portfolio. Bond was a national spokesman for NIRS research, frequently presenting at conferences and meetings in DC and across the nation as well as providing expert testimony to state legislatures. He has been quoted in numerous publications about his research, including the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, the Financial Times, Barron's, Marketplace, and CNBC.

Bond spent four years as the Program Manager at the National Public Pension Coalition (NPPC) before joining NIRS. He held positions on Capitol Hill and at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities earlier in his career.

Bond earned his MA in Public Policy from George Washington University, and a BA in Political Science and Philosophy from Indiana University. He serves on the Academy's Membership Committee and co-chairs the retirement security and older workers working group. He also serves on the advisory board for the American Savings Education Council (ASEC).